My dear Bunny

I dont see any chance of coming now till after Christmas. We are engaged in a lawsuit. Mrs against the Imperial Hotel & them infernal hand – so may be a nuisance, & begins on Friday. But (to return to your letter) I don mean to say your sitters pleasures are dug for & sweated out? I thought you disliked your brush drew your stroke. And as for scant me, I wrote everything (4 times Orlando over, & showed wrote it 6 times; & after a morning of groaning & have 200 groaning &

words to show: & there as crazy as brothers ever
There are other facts; & then we,
who live in the same age, &
sometimes meet in the flesh,
have these mistaken ideas about each other.
What then is the worth of criticism? ?

Dear Bunny

Could you in your very great kindness tell me which is the right Inn to stay at at King's Lynn? I'm told that there are two — the Good, the Man had. We are going there travelling via Yorks up the East Coast. & any information will be gratefully accepted

Yours affy

Dear Bunny,

Look if you persist in being generous, I can't refuse to take the books, which make a very magnificent row. What's more, I read them. And if anyone could induce me to write about Shakespeare, it would be you: perhaps I will one day; but apart from wanting to write something (such different at the moment (entirely different from Shakespeare) I have a kind of feeling that under one is powered as the trade, or is a farrulous old bangbody, from America, one ought to hold one's tongue. So I will: I mean I won't. And as to Lozen is what I mean. & take my blessing. I'm incapable of writing sense at the moment because one of our friends, an intolerable windbag, but golden hearted, is just ringing the bell. But I think you are very generous to your old friends.

Cant I send you a book in exchange?

Dear Bunny,

I have signed the paper – is that right? – with pleasure. Here it is. I have never heard of the Welsons, but that is my discredit, & it seems a monstrous case.
Yes: we keep your offer in mind, like a dock leaf among nettles. That is, London is a hurly-burly: I'm packing to go to Rodmell: Smets to send: telephone rings: pens wont
write. Oh, what about Westmorland?
Your cottage in that paradise?

No time for more. Vale, atq
